H MORONO, APRIL 26TH. 1886.

In the House of Lords the Criminal Lav Amendment Bill has been read a secon time and will in due course, we think there can be little doubt, pass into law. The object of the Bill is to enable, not to compel, any accused person to give evidence at any stage of the proceedings against him. present accused persons are allowed to make a statement, but with the exception of some cases specially provided for in recent legislation, the statement is not given on oath nor in England can the person making it be subjected to cross-examination upon it. In Hongkong, however, we have an Act by which a Judge or Magistrate may at any time examine an accused person and put such questions to him as he thinks fit. It is very rarely that this Act is applied; in fact it practically a dead letter, Judges and Magistrates objecting to it on the ground, we A full Chronology of remarkable events since understand, that it is un-English. The Act, which is adapted from the Indian Criminal Procedure Code, might, we believe, be applied with much advantage in many cases, and the objections to it we cannot but regard as for the most part merely sentimental. If it could be shown that the Act would for Canton. operate prejudicially to innocent persons acfatal, but we have sufficient confi tence in our Judges and Magistrates to believe that would never be allowed to have this effect. It is not fair to innocent men that they should have their mouths closed, and as Lord MONESWELL said in the debate on the Law of Evidence Amendment Bill, to deprive such of the opportunity of explaining their conduct in order to screen a few guilty men who might at present escape is not a rea. Our local Act—the Oral Examination of Prisoners Act, 1873—allowing the Judges and Magistrates to examine prisoners, would, if applied, have very much the same effect as the Bill introduced by destinations is extended to 11lb and the postage Lord Bramwell is intended to have: but, should the latter pass, the local Law Revision Committee will doubtless recommend its introduction here when they come to deal with the Ordinances governing the law as to evidence in criminal cases. There is, however, one very important difference between the two which must attract attention, and perting at the latter and Singapore, conthat is that whereas Lord BRAMWELL'S Bill between Europe and the Far East. contemplates allowing an accused person to give evidence when he chooses and subjecting him to cross-examination on such evidence when given, the Oral Examination of Chefco Convention, together with many other Prisoners Ordinance allows the Judge or cisco, Yokohama, and Hongkong. In some of the cases we refer to there were several prisoners, and in reference to these we may be allowed to quote the following remarks made by the Lord Chancellor in the House of Lords, and with which we will conclude the present article:-"He wished to add a word of which this change of the law was seen in operation.
